Public-Private Partnership Supports Conservation Treatment of Post Office Mural in Boone, North Carolina

On October 26, 2015, the Town of Boone and the Daniel Boone Chapter of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution (NSDAR) sponsored a dedication for the conservation treatment of a historic mural located inside the Downtown Boone Post Office.

The dedication featured remarks from state and local officials with the NSDAR, and Boone Mayor Pro-Tem Rennie Brantz, who said the mural is of “enormous importance” to the town’s heritage.

The mural restoration is the “finishing touch” on the renovation of the Boone Downtown Post Office, according to architect Randy Jones.

In November 2013, the Boone Town Council hired David Goist, Conservator of Paintings and Fellow member of the American Institute for Conservation, to conduct a conservation treatment of the Alan Tompkins mural painted in 1940 and titled “Daniel Boone on a Hunting Trip in Watauga County.” The Daniel Boone Chapter of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution helped to fund the costs of the conservation treatment.

The treatment involved removal of 74 years of accumulated dust, surface grime, and wall paint drips from the 46 x 136 inch painting on canvas mounted onto a plaster wall.

The recent Vance Monument project in Asheville, North Carolina, which was listed as one of North Carolina’s Most Endangered Artifacts, is another successful public-private partnership that resulted in the renovation of an important North Carolina historic landmark. Projects such as these can serve as successful examples of how public-private cooperatives can fund the preservation of North Carolina treasures.
Bienenstock Furniture Library Association—NCPC Preservation Grant Update

The Bienenstock Furniture Library’s Rare Book Room (High Point, North Carolina) is home to over 350 furniture, architecture and home furnishings titles dating to 1543. The Library prides itself in the fact that not only is our collection the only one of its kind in the US; we make our Rare Book Room and entire collection accessible to any and all visitors. Our Rare Book Room is housed in a climate and humidity controlled chamber to ensure proper care of the books. Even with having a state of the art facility such as ours, and a preservation policy in place, the reality is the condition of these old and rare books deteriorates with usage.

The Bienenstock Furniture Library is a non-profit organization that relies on outside funding to meet many of our preservation needs. By receiving grants like the one from the North Carolina Preservation Consortium (NCPC), we are able to preserve these wonderful books and share the knowledge within their pages to all who have a love for furniture, design and architecture.

Last year we were fortunate enough to receive a grant from NCPC to have our copy of the first edition of The Gentleman and the Cabinet-Maker’s Director by Thomas Chippendale, 1754, preserved by Etherington Conservation Center in Browns Summit, North Carolina. Thomas Chippendale is one of the most relished designers of the 18th Century and this volume is considered one of the most important books in our collection. Without the help of grant funding from NCPC we would not have been able to keep this book in circulation and available for all to see and use for research. We are not only preserving books we are preserving furniture history. We are honored that the NCPC sees the importance of preservation and keeping educational materials available to all.

NCPC New Member Spotlight

NCPC welcomes new member Carolinas Aviation Museum. Located in Charlotte, North Carolina, the museum focuses on the history of aviation and highlights historic examples of civil, commercial and military airplanes and helicopters. CAM opened in 1993 and underwent an expansion in 2010. The Dolph Overton Aviation Library is also part of the museum.

One of the most famous collection items is a U.S. Airways Airbus A320-214 built in 1999. According to the CAM website, the A320 model was the first to incorporate “fly by wire” technology and composite construction of some of the components.

You may remember this particular aircraft as U.S. Airways Flight 1549, the plane that Captain Chesley “Sully” Sullenberger and First Officer Jeff Skiles successfully navigated to safety on the Hudson River in 2009 when a flock of Canada Geese flew into both engines, shutting them down.

Next time you are in the Charlotte area and want to see some amazing examples of aviation history, stop by the Carolinas Aviation Museum. They are located at 4672 First Flight Drive in Charlotte, North Carolina. You may call them at 704-997-3770. When you go, thank them for being an NCPC member!
DigCCurr Registration Now Open for 2016

The DigCCurr Institute consists of one five-day session in July 2016 and a two-day follow-up session in March 2017. The summer event begins at 6 PM on Sunday, July 17 with a welcome and opening event.

Each day of the summer session will include lectures, discussion and hands-on "lab" components. A course pack and a private, online discussion space will be provided to supplement learning and application of the material.

This institute is designed to foster skills, knowledge and community-building among professionals responsible for the curation of digital materials.

Institute Instructors Include:
- Drs. Helen Tibbo, Cal Lee, and Kam Woods, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
- Dr. Nancy McGovern, Massachusetts Institute of Technology
- Dr. Carolyn Hank, University of Tennessee, Knoxville
- Dr. Lorraine Richards, Drexel University

For more information, see the DigCCurr 2016 Institute website.

Art Institute of Chicago Receives $10m Gift

The Grainger Foundation has generously committed $10 million to the Art Institute of Chicago to realize the long-term vision and ambitions of the Art Institute’s Department of Conservation. Founded nearly 60 years ago, the Art Institute’s Department of Conservation has grown to include specialists across all media.

Retiring President and Eloise W. Martin Director Douglas Druick said, "The Art Institute is known for a particular brand of research that depends on close collaboration between curators, conservators, and conservation scientists. We are immensely grateful to The Grainger Foundation for fueling that work, as well as supporting the all-important preservation and stewardship of our collections. The newly established Grainger Fund for Conservation will allow us to attract and retain talent to our program, and to serve as a training ground for emerging talent in the fields of conservation and conservation science."

For more information, see the Art Institute’s press release online.

New NEH Grant Guidelines

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) has issued its 2016 guidelines for applying for their Preservation Assistance Grants for Smaller Institutions. These grants help small and midsized institutions such as libraries, museums, historical societies, archival repositories, cultural organizations, town and county records offices, and colleges and universities improve their ability to preserve and care for their significant humanities collections. The maximum award is $6,000.00.

The program encourages applications from small and mid-sized institutions that have never received an NEH grant. Grant funds can be used for preservation assessments, consultation with preservation professionals, purchase of storage furniture and preservation supplies, purchase of environmental monitoring equipment, or education and training.

The deadline to apply for an NEH Preservation Assistance Grant is May 3, 2016. For more see the NEH website and this free webinar on writing a Preservation Assistance Grant Proposal.
IMLS and FAIC Announce New Collections Assessment Program

The Institute of Museum and Library Services and the Foundation of the American Institute for Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works (FAIC) announced a new program to provide museums with collections conservation assessments.

The Collections Assessment for Preservation (CAP) program will build upon the former Conservation Assessment Program that was funded by IMLS and administered by Heritage Preservation for 24 years, until Heritage Preservation ceased operations in 2015. The new program will continue to support collections assessments for small and medium-sized museums throughout the nation.

“Many museums need help understanding the condition of their collections and how to properly prioritize their conservation activities,” said IMLS Director Dr. Kathryn K. Matthew. “We are delighted to be working with FAIC. The new CAP program is much improved and is designed to give museums the tools they need to build strong and lasting in-house collections care and preservation programs.”

“We are honored to be working with IMLS to build on the success of such a valued program,” stated FAIC Executive Director Eryl P. Wentworth. “The new CAP program will be a collaborative effort to provide support and expertise to the staff of collecting institutions, helping them create and implement sustainable programs for the best possible care of their collections. We are excited to begin!”

The three year partnership will match professional conservators with participating museums to conduct assessments of their collections and will encourage the inclusion of building assessments, regardless of the age of the structures. Other key components to this new CAP program will include linking museums to training and other resources as needed; incorporating a structured follow-up session with museums and assessors; and improving training for and review of assessors.

In the first year of the program, FAIC will focus on development of the systems and infrastructure needed to run the program, such as museum and assessor application and evaluation materials; staff to manage the grant program; the creation of a roster of qualified assessors; and promotion of the program. FAIC plans to announce the first call for applications from museums to participate in the program in fall of 2016 with an early 2017 deadline. Detailed information will be available at www.conservation-us.org and www.imls.gov.

Support NCPC by Shopping Amazon Smile

In November 2015 NCPC received its first AmazonSmile disbursement. Thanks to all of you who support us through this program. AmazonSmile makes it easy to support NCPC by shopping online. When you order items via AmazonSmile, the AmazonSmile Foundation will donate 0.5% of the purchase price to NCPC. By selecting NCPC as your designated charity, your purchases give back to NCPC at no additional cost to you. When you start your shopping with AmazonSmile you automatically support NCPC.

To sign up, log in to your Amazon account at http://smile.amazon.com. Search their database for North Carolina Preservation Consortium, and select NCPC as your charitable organization. When you are ready to shop, simply enter the Amazon website through the AmazonSmile URL.

More information on the AmazonSmile program can be found on their website. Please note that purchases made through AmazonSmile are not tax deductible. You may also change your designated charity at any time, but we hope that you stay with NCPC. AmazonSmile is an easy and cost effective way to help support NCPC and our programs.
